

10 Warning Signs To Update Your HR Resume

...Even If You're Doing A Great Job!

Sales & Profit

Your organization's sales revenue & profit have been declining for one year or more.

Hiring & Staffing

A hiring freeze has been announced and current open positions will not be filled.

Pay & Bonuses

Pay raises have been deferred for six months or eliminated until further notice.

Corporate Travel

Limitations have been placed on travel — especially “non-essential” travel.

Expense Books

All expense books are scrutinized heavily or require more approvals than ever before.

Top execs are unavailable, stressed out or working longer hours than usual.

Other execs are canceling routine meetings & spending more time behind closed-doors.

Leadership programs & training budgets have been cut or eliminated altogether.

The buzz and rumors about downsizings & layoffs are pervasive and off the charts.

A merger or acquisition has recently taken place resulting in redundant HR positions.

Senior Leaders

Meetings

Budgets

Office Buzz

Mergers

If more than 4 of the above signs are present at the same time, consider your current position in jeopardy – and time to check out:

HRResumeSecrets.com